this paper examines the impact of the harsh 2012 winter on livestock herding households in kyrgyzstan and identifies policy options to increase household resilience to such shocks while existing studies mostly focus on rainfall shocks in tropical or dry climate areas this analysis examines the exceptionally harsh winter that hit kyrgyzstan in 2012 which resulted in the death of 25 000 animals using a unique household panel survey merged with observed temperature data the analysis finds that on average the negative effects of the winter shock on household welfare are significant and persistent over time leading to a 5 percent and a 8 percent decrease in households food consumption expenditure in the short 2011 2013 and medium run 2011 2016 respectively when disaggregating by income quantiles the evidence shows that negative impact is concentrated in the upper quantiles of the welfare distribution several policy options are identified as effective in mitigating the negative welfare impacts of the weather shock first supporting households to restock their herds following weather shocks is found to significantly improve medium term welfare by 10 percent relative to those that did not restock restocking efforts can be addressed in a holistic manner that takes into account immediate household needs while simultaneously building long term resilience in the livestock sector this may include mitigating animal losses through the development of local forage markets that increase the availability of winter forage combined with efforts to improve the genetic pool of livestock species through breeding programmes that select for resiliency traits second results show that households living in regions with higher access to public veterinary services had significantly better welfare outcomes following the winter shock improvements of veterinary services and strengthening community based organizations focusing on livestock and pasture development may help herding households to cope with weather shocks

in the midst of globalization technological change and economic anxiety we have deep doubts about how well the task of investor protection is being performed in the u s the focus is on the securities exchange commission part of the explanation is economic and political the failure to know the right balance between investor protection and capital formation and the resulting battle among interest groups over their preferred solutions in selling hope selling risk author donald c langevoort argues that regulation is also frustrated at nearly every turn by human nature as exhibited both on the buy side investors and sell side corporate executives bankers stockbrokers there is plenty of savvy and guile but also ample hope fear ego overconfidence social contagion and the like that persistently filter and distort the messages regulators try to send this book is the first sustained effort to link the key initiatives of securities regulation with our burgeoning awareness in the social sciences of how people and organizations really behave in economic settings it examines why corporate fraud occurs and how best to deter it and compensate its victims the search for an edge via insider trading the disclosure apparatus and its gatekeepers sales efforts and manipulation in ponzi schemes internet scams private offerings and crowdfunding and how this all helps explain the recent global financial crisis it ends by turning these insights back on the task of regulation itself and the strategies and frustrations of making regulation work in a financial world that is at once increasingly sophisticated yet deeply human and incurably flawed care and support affects a large number of people eight out of 10 people aged 65 will need some care and support in their later years some people have impairments from birth or develop them during their working life some 5 million people care for a friend or relative some for more than 50 hours a week the current system does not offer enough support until a crisis point is reached the quality of care is variable and inconsistent and the growing and ageing population is only going to increase the pressure consequently two core principles lie at the heart of this white paper the first is that individuals communities and government should do everything possible to prevent postpone and minimise people s need for formal care and support the system should be built around the promotion of people s independence and well being the second principle is that people should be in control of their own care and support with personal budgets and direct payments backed by clear comparable information and advice that will allow individuals and their carers to make the choices that are right for them this paper sets out the principles and approach with sections covering strengthening support within communities housing better information and advice assessment eligibility and portability for people who use care services carers support defining high quality care improving quality keeping people safe a better local care market workforce personalised care and support integration and joined up care this book offers a critical assessment of the history of the euro its crisis and the rescue measures taken by the european central bank and the community of states the euro induced huge capital flows from the northern to the southern countries of the eurozone that triggered an inflationary credit bubble in the latter deprived them of their competitiveness and made them vulnerable to the financial crisis that spilled over from the us in 2007 and 2008 as private capital shied away from the southern countries the ecb helped out by providing credit from the local money printing presses the ecb became heavily exposed to investment risks in the process and subsequently had to be bailed out by intergovernmental rescue operations that provided replacement credit for the ecb credit which itself had replaced the dwindling private credit the interventions stretched the legal structures stipulated by the maastricht treaty which in the absence of a european federal state had granted the ecb a very limited mandate these interventions created a path dependency that effectively made parliaments vicarious agents of the ecb s governing council this book describes what the author considers to be a dangerous political process that undermines both the market economy and democracy without solving southern europe s competitiveness problem it argues that the eurozone has to rethink its rules of conduct by limiting the role of the ecb exiting the regime of soft budget constraints and writing off public and bank debt to help the crisis countries breathe again at the same time the eurosystem should become more flexible by offering its members the option of exiting and re entering the euro something between the dollar and the bretton woods system until it eventually turns into a federation with a strong political power centre and a uniform currency like the dollar
