in an age when we are all multiculturalists now as nathan glazer has said the politics of identity has come to pose new challenges to our liberal polity and the presuppositions on which it is founded just what identity means and what its role in the public sphere is are questions that are being hotly debated in this book susan hekman aims to bring greater theoretical clarity to the debate by exposing some basic misconceptions about the constitution of the self that defines personal identity about the way liberalism conceals the importance of identity under the veil of the abstract citizen and about the difference and interrelationship between personal and public identity hekman s use of object relations theory allows her to argue against the postmodernist resort to a fictive subject for a core self that is socially constructed in the early years of childhood but nevertheless provides a secure base for the adult subject such a self is social particular embedded and connected a stark contrast to the neutral and disembodied subject posited in liberal theory this way of construing the self also opens up the possibility for distinguishing how personal identity functions in relation to public identity against those advocates of identity politics who seek reform through the institutionalization of group participation hekman espouses a vision of the politics of difference that eschews assigning individuals to fixed groups and emphasizes instead the fluidity of choice arising from the complex interaction between the individual s private identity and the multiple opportunities for associating with different groups and the public identities they define inspired by foucault s argument that power is everywhere hekman maps out a dual strategy of both political and social cultural resistance for this new politics of identity which recognizes that with significant advances already won in the political legal arena attitudinal change in civil society presents the greatest challenge for achieving more progress today in the struggle against racism sexism and other forms of oppression

Europe in Identity Crisis

the civil war that has intermittently raged in the sudan since independence in 1956 is according to francis deng a conflict of contrasting and seemingly incompatible identities in the northern and southern parts of the country identity is seen as a function of how people identify themselves and are identified in racial ethnic cultural linguistic and religious terms the identity question related to how such concepts determine or influence participation and distribution in the political economic social and cultural life of the country war of visions aims at shedding light on the anomalies of the identity conflict the competing models in the sudan are the arab islamic mold of the north representing two thirds of the country in territory and population and the remaining southern third which is indigenously african in race ethnicity culture and religion with an educated christianized elite but although the north is popularly defined as racially arab the people are a hybrid of arab and african elements with the african physical characteristics predominating in most tribal groups this configuration is the result of a historical process that stratified races cultures and religions and fostered a passing into the arab islamic mold that discriminated against the african race and cultures the outcome of this process is a polarization that is based more on myth than on the realities of the situation the identity crisis has been further complicated by the fact that northerners want to fashion the country on the basis of their arab islamic identity while the south is decidedly resistant francis deng presents three alternative approaches to the identity crisis first he argues that by bringing to the surface the realities of the african elements of identity in the north thereby revealing characteristics shared by all sudanese a new basis for the creation of a common identity could be established that fosters equitable participation and distribution second if the issues that divide prove insurmountable deng argues for a framework of diversified coexistence within a loose federal or confederate arrangement third he concludes that partitioning the country along justified borders may be the only remaining option to end the devastating conflict the present volume assembles essays from a broad cultural and professional spectrum around the question of european cultural identity the heterogeneity of the contributors their differing points of departure and methods attests to a tension in intellectual communities which today is more intense than ever europe s identity crisis is not merely an empirical matter it reflects a far deeper and far older discursive crisis the mandate of europe s traditional intellectual institutions to preserve and police their own cultural heritage has proved incapable of evolving in a manner sufficient to account for the mutation in its object european culture it is not merely that europe s identity like any identity in the flux of history has changed rather the notion of identity the very basis of any questions of who we are where we are going and the appropriate political forms and social institutions for further existence all rely on a logic of identity which has at best become extremely problematic it is this problematization which provides the common thread unifying the following essays each contributor in his her own way and with respect to his her own research object confronts the adequacy of the concept of cultural identity the hidden presuppositions of this concept are indeed remarkable and the logic of cultural identity prescribes that they remain undisclosed

Identity Transformation and Identity Politics Under Structural Adjustment in Nigeria
